5

A

10

A

The invention relates to a method for accessing a service in a telecommunication which may be network, be it an intelligent network, a private network or a mobile radio network, in this network, it is from an arbitrary communication terminal device. It is thereby necessary to authenticate oneself by means of entering digit sequences in order to gain access to the ln addition desired service. Besides, the invention relates to a device in a telecommunication network that makes is possible to carry out a secure authentication of a user in the case of a service call.

Figure 1